BLUEPRINTS & BOOKS Building a Path to the Profession

Join the Texas Society of Architects (TxA) in bringing the world of architecture to young students! TxA invites members to visit a local elementary school, library, or community space to read an architecture-themed book and/or lead a simple design activity. Through storytelling and conversation, architects help young learners discover how buildings shape our communities.

OUR GOAL: Introduce 1,000 students across Texas to architecture.

Ways to Participate

READ TO A CLASSROOM

Sign up to visit a local school, library, or community space to read a book or lead a short design activity.

Reach out to your child's teacher, a local school administration office, library, or community center to set up a visit during Architecture Week. Most locations may require advance permission to access their property and/or schedule space.*

SIGN UP EARLY

Early registrants will receive an architecture-themed children's book to read during their visit and leave behind for the classroom.

SPONSOR BOOKS

Unable to visit a classroom? You can still participate by sponsoring books that will be distributed to participating schools and libraries.

SHARE YOUR VISIT

If you host a visit, take a few photos and submit them with a short recap so we can celebrate your impact and track our progress toward reaching 1,000 students statewide.
